What makes a house a home?

Last year, my husband and I helped my parents build a house. After countless months of meeting with contractors, waiting for supplies, and finally finding the perfect faucet, it was finally finished. The new house was bright and beautiful, but awfully quiet once all the hammering stopped.

What to do? After hours of unpacking, we were famished. So we ordered dinner, and while we waited, we cleared the dining room. One by one, the new chairs were unwrapped. The table was cleaned, and then a few glasses were found. Little by little, the room came alive. And that magical night, our worlds stopped as we shared our first meal in the new house. We laughed and we talked, and made lists of all the people we would soon invite to visit.

In the months that have since passed, the whole house has become a gracious and welcoming home where all our celebrations take place. In my family, traditions are important. We like opening our homes to our friends and family because it is our way of showing how much we care. In this catalog are some of our favorite things, chosen to help make your home gracious and welcoming. We hope they will share many happy times with you in the years to come.

*All the best,
